

CONTENTS

DEDICATION	iii
ACKNOWLEDGEMENTS	xiii
ABOUT THE AUTHOR	xv
CHAPTER 1: TOWARD DISMOUNTING THE DEAD
HORSE	1
Avoiding Overload as Boundary Management	2
Control/Flow Paradox	4
Background	5
Intended Audiences	7
Objectives	7
Overview	8
PART I: MAKING TIME	9
CHAPTER 2: BE ABLE TO BE EFFICIENT IN ALL
THINGS	11
Related Overload Adaptation
Teaching Applications	12
Know Your “Lines in the Sand” and State Them Clearly, Early, and Often	12
Interact with Students with Intentional Time and Depth	14
Use Technological Tools in Course-Related Scholarship	14
Use Technological Tools to Check for Plagiarism	16
Use Robots to Score and Record Tests	17
Digitize Everything that You Can	17

Word Process Written Feedback	17
Use Group Feedback Thoughtfully	18
Remember that Perfect Is Not Beautiful	19
Do Not Permit Handwritten Student Work	19
Parse Your Time and Set Appropriate Expectations	20

CHAPTER 3: EXPRESS YOUR VALUES IN HOW YOU

USE YOUR TIME	21
---------------------	----

Related Overload Adaptation

Teaching Applications	22
Identify the Major Areas of Your Life	22
Assign Times for Each Area	23
Identify the Major Areas of Your Faculty Work	25
Assign a Weight to Each Area	26
Do the Math	26
Keep Doing the Math	26
Use Discretion in Disclosing the Details	27

CHAPTER 4: DON'T HOARD RESPONSIBILITY,

SHARE IT	31
----------------	----

Related Overload Adaptation

Teaching Applications	32
Employ NIFs	32
Students	33
Mastery Learning Programs	36
Outside Experts	38
Research Data Bases	39
Require Students to Download and Print Course Materials .	41

Required Students to Monitor Their Own Completion of Course Assignments	42
Require Students to Prepare Their Own Study Guides	42

CHAPTER 5: FOR EVERY ASPECT OF YOUR TEACHING,
FIND A TIME AND PLACE BEFITTING IT 45

Related Overload Adaptation

Teaching Applications	47
Identify the Major Activities of Your Teaching Work	47
Allocate Time to Each Type of Work	47
Create a Place Befitting Each Activity	48
Be Able to Block Access to You	49
Leave the Office	51
Work at Home if You Can	52
Know Your Campus Options	53
Know Your Community Options	54

CHAPTER 6: BE SHORT WITH MANY SO THAT YOU MAY
BE LONG WITH A FEW 57

Related Overload Adaptation

Teaching Applications	59
Frame Asynchronous Communication Tools as Your Personal Staff	59
Be Proud of Your Personal Staff	60
Do Not Provide Immediate Access to You except during “Open Door” Periods	61
Teach Your Students Your Communication System	62

Create a Time and Place to Process Asynchronous Communication	63
Interact Electronically in Correspondence with the Time Available	64
CHAPTER 7: STICK TO YOUR KNITTING, REFER TO OTHER HELPERS WHEN POSSIBLE	67
Related Overload Adaptation
Teaching Applications	67
Do Not Try to Be a Counselor	67
Do Not Take on Being a Composition Teacher	70
Do Not Attempt to Be the Computer Support Desk	72
Do Not Think that You Need to Be a Librarian	73
Become Familiar with Pertinent Campus and Community Resources	74
Have a Current Referral Sheet and Use It	74
PART II: MAKING CHANGE	77
CHAPTER 8: COMPETING COMMITMENTS AND CHANGE	79
Assumption Hunting	80
Step 1: State the Change Commitment	80
Commitment Task	80
Commitment Examples	80
Step 2: Discern What You Are Doing to Prevent the Change from Happening	82
Interference Task	82
Interference Examples	83

Step 3: Identify the Competing Commitment	83
Competing Commitment Task	83
Competing Commitment Examples	84
Step 4: Discover the Big Assumption Behind the
Competing Commitment	85
Big Assumption Task	85
Big Assumption Examples	85
Assumption Testing	87
Step 1: Observe Yourself in Relation to Your Big
Assumption	88
Observation Task	88
Observation Example	88
Step 2: Search for Evidence that Undermines Your
Big Assumption	88
Countervailing Evidence Task	88
Countervailing Evidence Example	88
Step 3: Construct a Biography of Your Big Assumption
Big Assumption Biography Task	89
Big Assumption Biography Example	89
Step 4: Conduct Mini-Experiments that Test Your
Big Assumption	89
Mini-Experiment Task	89
Mini-Experiment Example	89
CHAPTER 9: NETWORKS AND CHANGE	91
Networks	92
Home Department	93

Step 1: List All of Your Colleagues in Your Department	93
Home Institution	93
Step 2: List All of the Members of Work Groups at Your Institution with Whom You Feel that You Meet Frequently, besides Your Department	93
Step 3: List Any Other Colleagues at Your Institution with Whom You Feel You Have a Relationship	93
Outside Professional Communities	96
Step 4: List All of Your Colleagues Outside of Your Institution with Whom You Feel You Have a Relationship	96
Sex and Number	96
Step 5: Beginning with Your Home Department List, then Home Institution List, and Finally Outside Professional Communities List, Designate the Sex of the Person and Enumerate the Relationship	96
Mattering	96
Step 6: For Each Relationship in General, Indicate How Much What that Person Thinks, Feels, or Does Matters to You	96
Mapping	98
• Step 7: Sector by Sector (Department, Institution, Communities), Place Each Relationship on the Network Map in the Ring that Corresponds with How Much that Relationship Matters to You	98

Change	99
Desired Change	99
Step 8: Identify the Desired Change(s) in Your Professional Practice	99
Force Field Analysis	99
Step 9: For Each Relationship in General, Indicate whether You Think that if the Person Knew about Your Desired Change in Your Professional Practice that Person Would Support or Resist Your Making It	99
Force Field Mapping	100
Step 10: For Each Relationship, Place the Appropriate Support or Resistance Symbol (+, -, +/-, or blank) next to the Person's Numbered Circle or Square on the Network Map	100
Observing	100
Step 11: Examine Your Map and Take Note of Whatever Stands Out to You as Important	100
Change Strategies	100
Step 12: Determine Strategies for Increasing the Support in Your Networks and Decreasing the Resistance, PARTICULARLY IN YOUR INNER CIRCLES	100
 CHAPTER 10: BLESS ITS HEART	 103
 REFERENCES	 105
 INDEX	 113